GREENEVILLE

Greenville Boy Having Great Success as Physical Director—Exercises at Congregational Church—St. Mary's Wins Series—Notes.

The Pittston, Pa., Gazette, has the following paragraph about J. Hutchinson, a former Greenville boy. Mr. Hutchinson graduated from the Norwich Free Academy in 1913 and took a course in physical training in New York and is now located at Pittston where he is instructor in the Y. M. C. A. item in the Gazette reads as follows:

Physical training in Pittston, Pa., for its growing boys, it's tired business, but it's being done with the freshness of physical culture, which means everybody must have caught a stimulating impulse from the excellent exhibition of gymnastics given at the Y. M. C. A. by its physical department under the direction of the competent instructor, Hugh J. Hutchinson. The exhibition was a carefully planned for the event and the results reflected the greatest credit upon him and Mr. Hutchinson. Several hundred people felt well repaid for their presence at the exhibition. A testimonial dinner in honor of H. J. Hutchinson, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., was given at the Officers' Federal Reserve Corps, and other members of the Y. M. C. A. who have enlisted in the United States Army and Navy, were given a special dinner at the Hotel Redington, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., by the senior gymnasium class. The dinner was followed by a theatre party.

Commissioner Dismisses Gunn Claim

Finds That Death Did Not Result From Injuries Sustained in Fall From Staging—Decedent Did Not Come Within Scope of Workmen's Compensation.

In a finding announced on Monday afternoon Compensation Commissioner James J. Donohue of this city has dismissed the claim of Mrs. Ida Gunn of Vauxhall, Conn., widow of James Gunn, against the Central Vermont Railway Company. Mrs. Gunn claimed compensation for the death of her husband, it being claimed that his death was caused by injuries received while working at Stafford Springs in the employ of the railroad. The commissioner finds that Mr. Gunn was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of his injury, that he did not come within the scope of the workmen's compensation act, that the notice of claim for compensation was not received by the respondent within the time specified in the act and that there was no connection between the pneumonia which resulted in Mr. Gunn's death on February 9, 1916, and the injury received by Mr. Gunn on December 4, 1915.

The case was heard at the commissioner's office three times, on January 26, 1917 and by continuance on February 2, 1917 and March 12, 1917.

It was found that a contract of employment existed between the decedent and respondent on December 4, 1915, and had so existed for about five years prior thereto, the contract having been made in New London.

On September 30, 1914 the Central Vermont Railway Company of St. Albans, Vermont, served notice on the compensation commissioner of this district of non-acceptance of the workmen's compensation act, but it is found that the company had failed to serve a similar notice on James Gunn.

It is found that the average weekly wages of the decedent were $13.90.

Staging Planks Gave Way.

From the testimony it is found that on December 4, 1915, James Gunn was in the employ of the respondent company at Stafford Springs, and while engaged in erecting a water tank on their premises at Stafford Springs the planks of the staging on which he was standing gave way and in falling Gunn came in contact with pieces of timber used in the construction of the staging and finally landed on the ground, a distance of about 15 feet.

As a result of the fall Gunn received injuries about the upper portion of the right arm and shoulder.

On December 4, 1915, the day on which Gunn was injured, he was first examined by Dr. Hanley, who dressed his wounds, which consisted of lacerations of the nose in which he took some stitches, and as he classified it "bruises of a minor nature of the face."

He said he did not examine him further as Gunn said he felt all right, and he walked back to his boarding place.

Gunn returned to New London where he was treated by Dr. Stanton, who attended him three times at his office, and his last service was rendered on December 11, 1915, at which time it was considered that no further medical attention was needed.

Employed as Bridgeman.

It is found by the evidence that Gunn was a bridgeman, and had been in the employ of the company for some five years. Following his injury on December 4, 1915, he was unable to work until December 22nd, 1915, but worked from that time up to January 12, 1916, when he again quit and did not resume work until January 26, 1916, when he returned and worked continuously up to February 2nd, 1916, on which day he worked but five hours and then because of a hard cold.

On February 5, 1916 Gunn was attended at the house of his wife's sister, Mrs. George Carter, at Stafford Springs, at which time Gunn was found to be suffering from lobar pneumonia. He was removed to the hospital on February 5th and died on February 9th, 1916.

It is found that he left surviving him wife, Ida Gunn, with whom he was living at the time of his death. His wife is named in the caption as the claimant, having made a claim for compensation because of the death of her husband and a hearing was called that the facts in the case might be determined.

Several Important Questions.

There were several important questions to be decided in this case and they were as follows:

Was the decedent engaged in interstate commerce at the time of his injury and did he come within the scope of the workmen's compensation act or the federal employers' liability act?

Did the motive of claim for compensation comply with section 21 of the act?

Was there any connection between the pneumonia which caused the death of Mr. Gunn on February 9, 1916, and the injury received by him on December 4, 1915?

For the reasons set forth in a memorandum of decision it is found:

That the decedent was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of his injury.

That he did not come within the scope of the workmen's compensation act.

That the notice of claim for compensation was not received by the respondent within the time specified in section 21 of the act.

That there was no connection between the pneumonia which resulted in death on February 9, 1916, and the injury received by Gunn on December 4, 1915.

For these reasons the commissioner has dismissed the claim.

A snug fortune awaits the ingenious somebody who will devise a method, or scheme, or something, by which the victim can convince a book agent that he knows as much what he doesn't want as the book agent does.—Macon Telegraph.
